Data Sources (list):

Source	Description
The overlooked environmental footprint of increasing Internet use – research paper	Research paper written by a list of authors working at University of Maryland, Purdue University, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Yale University, Imperial College London
'How Bad are Bananas?: The Carbon Footprint of Everything – book written by Mike Berners-Lee	One of the most cited sources on the subject; book written by Mike Berners-Lee, English researcher and writer on carbon footprint and brother of Tim Bernes-Lee, inventor of www; also written "There's no Planet B"
IEA (Agentia Internationala pentru Energie)	International Energy Agency, works with countries around the world to shape energy policies for a secure and sustainable future; The Governing Board is composed of energy ministers or their senior representatives.
Cisco
World Economic Forum
UK Government conversion factors
The Shift Project	a French think tank advocating the shift to a post-carbon economy. A non-profit organization committed to serving the general interest through scientific objectivity, dedicated to informing and influencing the debate on energy transition in Europe
Statista
Global Web Index
Energuide	Belgian magazine & website about energy, edited by Sibelga (a gas & energy distributor)
8billiontrees	a carbon offset company that runs large-scale planting operations in the Amazon Rainforest
CEZ Romania
medium.datadriveninvestor.com	An article by Alex Panagides, CEO of MxHero (California-based software company providing cloud-based email technology)
Greenspector	A measurement and analysis solution to reduce the environmental impact of mobile and web applications